New CEO to lead rebranded travel data and analytics company Cirium

Cirium is on course to be the first to provide analytics to advance the funding, maintenance and build of aircraft fleets, commercial strategies and traveler experience

Cirium announced today that it is naming Jeremy Bowen as its new Chief Executive Officer (CEO).

The highly successful former VP Global Head of Sales for Cirium has also served as an executive at Accuity, Fircosoft and Dun & Bradstreet.

The company recently launched Cirium as its new corporate brand to position its leading data and analytics solutions for the wider travel industry. Cirium comprises of Cirium Solutions (actionable insights and analytical tools), Cirium Pro Services (consultancy and data customization) and FlightGlobal (legacy publishing and events).

New Cirium CEO, Jeremy Bowen, said: "It's a privilege to lead this company at this moment in its evolution. I strongly believe that Cirium has untapped potential in leveraging its acquired assets and is poised to make a huge impact in bringing control to an industry that is constantly in motion.

"Recent company acquisitions have also broadened our portfolio to create an impressive suite of solutions that are unrivalled in the industry. It's my role to now help our customers capitalize on these tools and build upon our success and expertise in aviation and the wider travel sector."

Cirium's comprehensive data and analytics portfolio has grown in recent years by bringing together best in class aviation tech companies Ascend, Diio, FlightStats and Innovata.

The company focuses on four key solution areas; improving the traveler experience, developing commercial strategy, managing financial investment and elevating air operations for its customers.

Cirium's analytics solutions are supported by one of the most comprehensive arrays of data available anywhere in world aviation. The group integrates global data across airline schedules, fleets, aircraft valuations, flight status, passenger traffic, revenues and traveler itineraries.

These datasets are combined into powerful solutions by Cirium's truly global team of over 400 developers, analysts, data scientists and market experts, based in its offices across the USA, Europe and Asia-Pacific.
